

CRITICAL RACE AND ETHNIC STUDIES

OVERVIEW

<https://www.uvm.edu/cas/ethnicstudies>

The Critical Race and Ethnic Studies Program educates students in the study of race and ethnicity in the United States. Race and ethnicity are not stable categories; rather, they are ever-changing processes that are contingent on history, politics, geography, culture, and multiple other factors.

The “critical” in critical race and ethnic studies indicates the deliberate complexity at the heart of the program's approach: while courses taught for the program are dedicated to the investigation of race and ethnicity as realities in the daily lives of people of color, of historically racialized communities, the program views these categories as inherently flawed and insufficient. Ultimately, race and ethnicity are not categories that translate seamlessly across historical periods or from culture to culture, even within the United States; moreover, these terms take on radically different meanings that depend on one's positionality within society's power structure. Furthermore, race and ethnicity are inherently relational and intersectional. One factor that has been consistent in every incarnation of racial and ethnic identity, however, is power. In the program, students come to appreciate the centrality of power relations in the development of the identities of racially marginalized communities and of whiteness.
